Proverbs for Four at Fifty

For Unaccompanied Mixed Chorus (SATB)

By Mark Zuckerman

About the Music

This group of four pieces got started when my friend, Bill Gross, asked me to set a verse from Mishle (the Book of Proverbs) as a present to his wife, Cheryl, on her fiftieth birthday. As I worked on the piece, it struck me how very apt it was to pick a Biblical quotation for this kind of celebration, especially considering the Biblical exhortation – in Vayyiqra (Leviticus), Chapter 25 – to make a jubilee of the fiftieth year. I found other proverbs to commemorate other fiftieth birthdays that were meaningful to me; so Oz V'Haqar L'Vushah, Cheryl's proverb (Chapter 31:Verse 25) "Strength and dignity are her clothing, and she smiles confidently at the future."), begat:

L'Khah Nirveh Dodim Ad HaBoker (17:18) "Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning; let us delight ourselves with love.", which I wrote to mark my own fiftieth birthday and my all-time best birthday present: my wedding, which occurred just the week before.

D'rakheyha Darkhey Noam (13:17) "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all of her paths are peace.", which was composed in honor of my wife Judith's fiftieth birthday, "with love and appreciation for her good counsel." That the text, which refers to the Torah, also appears in the liturgy is very appropriate for Judith, who is deeply interested in Jewish ritual and observance.

Reyshit Khakhmah (14:7) "The beginning of wisdom is, Get wisdom: therefore use all of your means to acquire understanding.", was written for the jubilee celebration of Town and Village Synagogue, where Bill, Cheryl, Judith and I are members. T & V is a special place for me, since it was through the synagogue that I met my wife, and we were married there. The congregation and clergy are down-to-earth and welcoming. This text captures succinctly what I feel is a prominent ideal shared by our synagogue community.

About the Language

These pieces are meant for general audiences. The texts carry a universal message.

The texts are all in Hebrew, since I wanted to convey their message in the language that would best convey their meaning to the people for whom these pieces were composed.

Hebrew is also authentic for these texts; perhaps this is why they sound so glorious in Hebrew.

Hebrew is remarkably compact: compare Uvkhah kinyankha kineyh v'nah with "Therefore use all of your means to acquire understanding"; the English has half again as many syllables, more than twice the words, and four times as many letters. And the Sephardic pronunciation (the way Hebrew is spoken today in Israel and therefore the way Jewish liturgy is pronounced in houses of Jewish worship around the world) has an extraordinary rhythmic vitality, suggestive of syncopation, asymmetrical meters, and the like: stuff that energizes a composer.

About the Musical Materials

These pieces use the octatonic collection (e.g., C-D-Eb-F-F#-G#-A-B).

This collection sounds a lot like the familiar minor scale – you can build it by taking the first four notes of the minor scale and then transposing them by a tritone. These pieces exploit a harmony drawn from this collection where familiar-sounding chords (i.e., sounding like major and minor triads) function in ways different from what you might expect from tonal music – some of them resembling operations found in twelve-tone music.

Acknowledgements

I am very grateful to Bill Gross, whose commission began this project. I'd also like to thank Sara Ruderman and the singers she conducted when we presented Oz V'Haqdar to the birthday girl, and Gregg Smith and his Singers, who read earlier versions of these pieces, and whose annual summer readings program has been a great learning experience as well as great fun. Most of all, I am indebted to my parents, Claire and Irving, and to my wife Judith for their unflagging faith and support.

About Mark Zuckerman

Mark Zuckerman holds a PhD in composition from Princeton University, and is a student of Milton Babbitt, David Epstein, J. K. Randall, and Elie Yarden. He has taught composition, tonal and atonal theory, orchestration, and computer music at Princeton and Columbia Universities, and published numerous scholarly articles and a book on listening to jazz, drawn from a popular jazz survey course he taught at Princeton and Columbia.

He founded Di Goldene Keyt, The Yiddish Chorale, and has written a bunch of choral music in English, Hebrew, and Yiddish, including some twenty arrangements for a cappella mixed chorus of Yiddish songs. His choral music has been performed and recorded by The Gregg Smith Singers, The Goldene Keyt Singers, The Workmen's Circle Chorus, Di Goldene Keyt/The Yiddish Chorale, and The New Yiddish Chorale and is published by Carl Fischer.

Performance Notes

The transliteration scheme is based on the system developed by the YIVO for transliterating Yiddish. The vowels are pronounced: "a" as in father, "e" as in feather, "i" or "y" between first and fierce, "o" as in forward, "u" as in foolish, and "'" (apostrophe) as a short "i" as in fit. Diphthongs are pronounced by sounding the two constituent vowels in sequence: "ay" as in fie, "ey" as in fey.

There are no capital letters in Hebrew. Since the sentences in these texts are short, the first letter of each word is capitalized to help singers unfamiliar with Hebrew identify the words and structure their breathing.

In D'rakheyha Darkhey Noam, the "ey" is decomposed into "e" and "y". As the dotted slur indicates, we should hear the "y" as an inflection of the "e" rather than a separate vowel.
